CONGRATULATIONS TO THE 2020 REAL TRENDS 500!

You are the elite-performing brokerages in the industry!

Over 1,700 firms qualified this year! The results—turned in by the firms on this year's REAL Trends 500—showed that the nation's leading realty firms outperformed the market, proving that size and leadership do matter.

The REAL Trends 500, now in its 33rd year, remains the undisputed leader in ranking the performance of residential real estate services firms. Due to the requirement of independent verification, the REAL Trends 500 is The Trusted Source for information about the performance of these firms.

REAL Trends is aware that there are significant numbers of brokerage firms that would qualify to be ranked in our survey but, for their own reasons, chose not to submit to the study. As such, any data that readers use to quantify market shares of a firm on this study or of national organizations should not be considered complete or authoritative.

Rankings are produced in several ways. We continue to rank firms first by closed transaction sides, then by sales volume. Firms ranked by sales volume may not appear in the rankings by transaction sides due to differences in the mean sales prices of homes across the country.

Recognizing that realty services firms do more than broker housing transactions, we continue to emphasize the addition of core services, such as mortgage, title insurance, escrow, property/casualty insurance and other types of products related to the real estate process.

Thank you to the leadership teams of the firms that took the time to submit their surveys. Special thanks to the leadership of the leading national real estate organizations who supported us in numerous ways by encouraging their affiliated member firms to share their results. Without this kind of support, this report would not be possible.

Our best wishes to our readers for continuing prosperity in 2020 and beyond.

LESSONS LEARNED: The biggest lesson was to make sure that we built the business with leadership comprised of true believers in what we were doing. Many times, people look at leadership positions in our industry and think that for whatever reason, it might be an improvement over being an agent. We recognized early on that it's not an improvement over being an agent. It's just a different channel. Finding leadership that wants to build, teach, and protect agents are vital to an organization.

AHA MOMENT: The biggest aha was when I recognized that chasing fads or misdirects within the industry ended up wasting a lot of time and energy. Instead, we should simply define what we were as an organization and stick with it. That's not the same as saying don't bend as the market changes or the regulatory climate changes, but rather, define what it is you are as a company and stick with it. I think there's been a tendency in our industry to take a look at something new and head in that direction. I think I used to do that, but we stopped doing that, probably 15 years ago, and it made a huge difference.

CHALLENGE: The biggest challenge is that the industry's moving so fast. So, staying on top of all the money that's in this industry, the tech, the stories, the hype. It's challenging to figure out the business trends and disseminate those systems to a varied geographic footprint. For me, a challenge is keeping a connection to the agents, and knowing the pulse of the market. That gets a little more challenging when you're dealing with so many markets.

GROWTH: Since the mid-'80s, the company has gone through close to 30 acquisitions. So, a large part of our growth is attributed to that. Organic growth is very important. There are two times in the company's history that we've essentially doubled our size. The first being January 1995. We bought a company in Baton Rouge. At that time, Latter and Blum's sales volume was somewhere around $580 million. With that acquisition, it jumped to $940 million. Then, in October 2015, we purchased a company in Houston, Texas. That one has been an interesting one for us because, at the time, Latter and Blum's sales volume was $2.1 billion. With that acquisition, we jumped to around $3.3 billion. Technically, with that acquisition, we have more agents in Houston than we do in all of Louisiana.

LESSONS LEARNED: I'm almost 80 now, so I've had a lot of experiences. I am an anxious person, so preparation helped me handle challenges that came my way. One of my favorite quotes is from Zig Ziglar, "Success happens when opportunity and preparation meet." So, being prepared for success is the way I had to operate to succeed. I also believe in helping agents be prepared. I have checklists for going on a listing appointment. We offer tutorials. We have lots of resource links. We have a real estate school that seats almost 100 people. We train. We're trying to build up agents and help them prepare for success.

GROWTH: We grew it by putting the agents first. We always tried to provide what the agents wanted. We strive to have the best commission splits out there. Because we're an independent company, we don't have franchise fees, so we have some room there. Our most significant growth leap came in 2003 when we moved from an office suite to an office building. We built it from 100 to 200 agents.

AHA MOMENT: My most significant AHA moment is that I never had the aspiration to grow a large company. It happened as we went along working. That taught me that if you do the right activities every day, then the results are always going to follow. Whether you're an agent trying to grow your business or a manager trying to grow a branch, the day-in, day-out things are essential. The entire culture of my company is a reflection of modeling what my mentor had done with me and coaching because my company is a serious coaching and growth company. Until recently, I didn't realize how much of an impact my mentor had on my success.

GROWTH: In 1990, we had five agents. Every year, we would open a new branch as a startup operation from scratch. It's hard and risky work, but it worked. We even opened a startup branch in 2007, and it's one of my most profitable offices today. In 2017, we started merging and acquiring some offices. We've made five acquisitions of some amazing brokerages, but we're also growing organically. Both must happen.

GROWTH: Most companies that grow fast or grow well; it's their culture. And I do believe that's the reason we've grown the way we have. We have had a lot of like-hearted people that have hearts like us, hearts of service, who want to give back, that come on board. And we've had times where we've had to prove that our culture was so important to us that we've let top-producing agents go—agents who were destroying our culture. Every time we've done that, we more than replace that top agent very quickly.

LESSONS LEARNED: We learned a lot during the downturn of 2008. One thing is to cross-train staff. We have several of our team who can do many things and help each other out. We understand the importance of having part-time and hourly positions, so if we need to back down, we can do it easier. We also have an on-staff minister. That's one of the best things we did for our company. He is there to inspire and help us put things into perspective.

LESSONED LEARNED: I was fortunate to have two influential mentors in this business. One is my father, who was the consummate people person, and his partner George Beverly. George was a commercial real estate professional, but also an outstanding financial operations businessperson. As those two guys mentored me, it became clear that there are indeed two sides to this business. One is the sales generation side, and then the other part of running an excellent real estate company is you have to be a good operator. That proved to be the case during the downturn that we all experienced in the late 2000s. I came to appreciate that you've got to be a good operator to run an excellent real estate company.

GROWTH: We've done a lot of organic growth through recruiting over the years, and we've also done a fair number of mergers and acquisitions. Most of our mergers and acquisitions were in surrounding markets as a way to enter a neighboring community. Our business is all about the people. So, if we can merge the right company with a good cultural fit and the right people in a new market, it makes a lot of sense from a strategic growth standpoint.

MOTIVATION: At a young age, my dad gave me a book called How I Made $1 Million Recycling Old Houses. I read it when I was 12 years old, and I got hooked on real estate. I found my passion for real estate at a very young age. Shortly after reading that book, I consumed everything I could about real estate. That naturally led me to get my real estate license, invest, and then ultimately decide to own a brokerage company.

LESSONS LEARNED: Follow your passion. Do what you're passionate about. That passion will help carry you through the difficult days. Next, understand that people matter. The people that you're in business with matter. The people who you have in your offices matter. Like-minds can do amazing things. When you see changes in the industry, you must be able to adapt. As you see a pattern going in one direction, you either need to get on with it or go in the opposite direction. Brokers must have grit. They must be able to stick it out and work hard to make your offices successful. It's a constantly changing and evolving industry.

GROWTH: I am hyper-focused on the executive leadership team, the people who are around me because they're who I work through. I spend a lot of time working with them, understanding who they are, what they're about, and what they want in life and then helping them to achieve that. Later, our growth plan evolved outward from there. We believe in having a personal relationship, connecting with every agent. We look at their goals, determine the gap, figure some numbers, put an action plan together and ask them, "What will you do by when and how will I know that you did that?" Then, we hold them accountable for it. I found that people craved that and need it in a safe environment.

LESSONS LEARNED: I think servant leadership takes a high level of humility and serving others. I get into the trenches and find out what agents know and what they need to know and support them. I never want to make them wrong. I always want to help them learn how to do it right. I often will say, "I'm your offensive tackle. I've got on your blind side, and so come to me, we're in this together." I treat it like a true partnership. It certainly helps that I've set my real estate business aside to help them build theirs.

AHA MOMENT: In 2007, we were invited to become a Sotheby's affiliate. Now that was a big moment for us, and had we not done that; I don't think that we would be the company that we are today. In 2009, after the 2008 economic meltdown, everybody, including real estate companies, was heading for the hills. Everybody was terrified, and I was sitting in my office and thought, "Bullock, if you're ever going to be anything but a single-county company, you've got to come out of this downturn better than you went in it." I went out and leased a 7,000 square foot building—the best commercial building in Marin County. We could not afford it. I hired a chief operating officer, which we also could not afford. I bet the whole company on the decision to come out of that downturn better than we had gone into it. Everyone thought I was crazy then. Now those people think I'm a genius. The market came back in 2010, and we've had almost ten years now of uninterrupted expansion in the economy and the residential real estate market.

LESSONS LEARNED: As a manager at every level in an organization, you have to surround yourself with people who are smarter than you are. But don't let them talk you out of your vision. You'll always have self-doubts. You've got to shut that chatterbox down and refill your thoughts with positive outcomes. Don't allow negativity to creep into your thinking. When you have a vision that is so strong that you know in your heart that it cannot fail, then you do everything you can to push that vision forward.

GROWTH: I heard a quote from Jerry Jones who owns the Dallas Cowboys and, subsequently, from Warren Buffett: "Every great asset I own, I probably overpaid for at the time I bought it, but I bought quality stuff, and over time it works out." We were always trying to find companies that were cheaper or that we could buy cheap with our money and leverage. We changed how we looked at real estate deals and got much more aggressive with what we were willing to do, and I think that that has helped us. Now we are bringing quality people into the organization.

ADVICE: You need to have a long-term plan that details where you want to be, but don't get locked into the short-term. Always keep your short-term flexible, because you never know when those deals are going to fall in your lap. You can say, "In five years, I want to grow 60%." You might not meet your yearly goals. Growth sometimes comes in big chunks, so don't get too depressed and drop off your game. It's continuously about effort. Keep at it.

AHA MOMENT: I designed 8Z and our model very consciously and methodically. The big AHA moment was the realization that one of the things I didn't plan for was just how much we built a team culture. It's a culture where agents rely on each other, support each other, cover for each other, and even coach each other. That was a big, pleasant surprise to me

LESSONS LEARNED: One lesson I've learned is that, frankly, 8Z is not all that good at recruiting. In particular, we're not all that good at recruiting experienced agents. I think we have a lot to offer. At the same time, I don't think we've told our story with experienced agents as well as we could have. We're good at taking brand new licensees and plugging them into our platform and turning them into a $10 million-plus producer in a couple of years. Another thing, I'm a big believer in having mentors and mentorship and mentoring others. One of my mentors is the author Jim Collins who wrote Good to Great and Built to Last. I was fortunate to work with Jim as a grad student. And he's inspired me over the years to shoot for greatness, to attempt and strive to build a great organization, not just a good one.

GROWTH: We had a combination of mergers and acquisitions and recruiting. We had a system in place where our goal was to add agents by the hundreds. In 2014, we had about 400 agents. We targeted the territories we thought we could do business in—places where we could grow. Running parallel to mergers and acquisitions, we were also doing a lot of recruiting, meeting with top agents, and bringing them into the firm.

AHA MOMENT: My AHA moment was back in 2010 when I saw that we had grown the company throughout the late 1990s and early 2000s, but we were not built with a solid foundation. When we hit the recession, we weren't positioned to handle the changes that were going on in the market. In 2014, we implemented systems so we could manage a brokerage of larger-scale size. We implemented a new back-office system, changed the organizational structure, and centralized certain services like administration. We also regionalized our management team, so instead of having our managers focus on individual offices, we have them focused on territories. We also structured the way we wanted to grow and worked closely with the brand to effectuate that growth through that five-year plan.

AHA MOMENT: My AHA moment was realizing that it was OK for me not to be motivated by money. I know that sounds weird, but for a long time, that's how I went about it. You can make a lot of money in real estate. Back in 2010 or 2011, I came across this idea that what gets me out of bed in the morning is the idea that I could help other people grow their companies and businesses, and it lit me on fire. From that point forward, everything that we did had to answer the question: Will this have an impact and change someone's life? I firmly believe that if I affected enough people's lives, our organization would be fine.

ADVICE: This is a no-brainer for me. Hire a coach. Find somebody who's done it before. Don't find somebody who's talked about it. If you want to grow to a $1 billion business, find someone who's built a $1 billion company. Your time is way too precious as a leader. There are so many people looking for you to lead, and when you mess up, you have an impact. Hire a coach who can help you navigate the vastness of mistakes that are out there.

AHA MOMENT: We feel like we have them every day right now because the business is changing so rapidly. Most recently, we've focused on the old days of recruiting—pounding the phones, trying to get as many appointments as we can, and then convincing agents one at a time to come over to our company. However, we don't know that that's the best way. We have decided that mergers and acquisitions with companies that match our cultural fit are an excellent way to go. That's been the AHA for us.

LESSON LEARNED: In terms of the mergers and acquisitions, you've got to put it out there that you are an interested party and offer an avenue to smaller brokerages or brokers who may want to get out of the business. Forge relationships with other brokers. Also, make the hard decisions early. We've had personnel issues where we knew it wasn't a great situation, and we wished we pulled the trigger sooner on making a change.

  Scott Lauri, Owner ERA Central Levinson Monroe Township, New Jersey    GROWTH: We've grown from both acquisitions and also organically. Acquisitions have made up about 60% of that growth, with most of it from merging two companies in 2015. Our organic growth is significant to us, and we feel we do that through the agent marketing support that we do—our coaching and training make that all happen. AHA MOMENT: When I look back, I see three AHA moments that changed the path of the company. One was early in my career when I first took over operations of the company in 2002. About a year later, I was thinking, what am I doing here? The company isn't making any money. I'm also the top agent. Should I join someone else, or should I keep doing this? Well, in the next 12 months, I recruited about 18 agents into the company. My next AHA moment was in 2013 when I acquired my largest competitor. I looked for another office location and decided to acquire another firm rather than acquire a building. My third AHA moment was merging ERA Central Realty Group with ERA Levinson, realizing that together as one company, we could be a force in our market.

John Meesseman, CEO and Chief Agent Happiness Officer

Real Living Kee Realty
Clinton Township, Michigan

RETENTION: My title is the chief agent happiness officer. I don't list and sell real estate. My job is to make agents' lives happier. I want to give them better tools, resources, support staff, fantastic teammates, a great title company, home service offerings, and more. In essence, everything revolves around putting them in a better position to sell the amount of real estate they want to sell and make them happier. For us, it's all about the internal customer, which is our real estate agent. Our vision is to be the largest real estate company in the state of Michigan, the largest home service provider. And, I think depending on what numbers you look at, I think we're No. 12 or No. 13 right now. We struggle with that vision because the last thing we want to do is sacrifice the service to our agents and lose our vision of having the agent be the center of our organization.

CULTURE: Our core values are family, integrity, kindness, advocacy, teamwork, and fun. You build a culture of agents who enjoy each other; they work well together. It's always exciting when agents at different offices hang out together. But, when you attract that talent and you deliver what you say you're going to deliver, you do what you say you're going to do, success breeds success. It's easier. Those agents that you hire help you find more great agents. They help you attract them. And then, that process repeats itself. It's like in Jim Collins' book, Good to Great. He describes the process of getting a flywheel turning. Once you get that flywheel turning, attracting the right agents, performing for them, and then helping you find more, your growth can start to be exponential.

REALTY EXECUTIVES

Eden Sunshine, CEO

Realty Executives Phoenix and Yuma
Phoenix, Arizona

LESSONS LEARNED: Systems are everything. The key to the success of any business is dependent on the quality of its systems. The systems range from how you answer the phones and recruiting to how you hire your team, market, and more. If you want to improve the business, the focal point of the improvement is developing your systems. In addition is the importance of the culture of your organization. And there's a lot of confusion about what culture means. Culture is explicitly not a list of core values that are on a wall, but the living out of the core values among the people in the organization. It's things that differentiate and how you live out those things.

GROWTH: Due to organic growth, intentional recruiting strategies, and mergers and acquisitions, 2018 was a big year for us. We were able to do that primarily because we looked at our efforts as a collaboration of people focused on recruiting, rather than just a few key executives. It became almost a game for the entire organization where everybody understood their role in relation to the recruiting and retention efforts here.

Robert Lyszczarz, President

RE/MAX Select

Westfield, New Jersey

GROWTH: All of our initial growth was organic, with our existing agents driving the growth by increasing their sales volume and helping us to grow the business by word of mouth. Then, we made a few key hires that enabled us to take our growth initiatives to a new level. Over the past two years, we've added five additional offices to our network, with three of them being organic and two of them acquisitions of existing RE/MAX offices. In addition to these offices, we've added a new commercial division RE/MAX Select Group and an office in Florida along with a couple of partnerships.

AHA MOMENT: As a coach and a leader, I'm never afraid to step up and ask for advice and suggestions from leadership and top agents. The agents know that my team and I are always accessible. We get out and do the things that help drive their business, whether it would be door knocking, cold calling, or running masterminds. We try new things and more work out than fail, but it's that creative energy that helps us distinguish our company in the marketplace. The best ideas come from brainstorming and not being afraid to try something and fail. But we always try to keep our fundamentals in check and keep the agents grounded.

Budge Husky, CEO

Premier Sotheby's International Realty
Naples, Florida

LESSONED LEARNED: Most of the lessons are painful, yet, they're great learning experiences. The first one may sound overly simplistic, but I believe it's the most important—people, not stuff. Over decades in this business, I realized that so much of the energy and resources invested in strategy and programs and tools are merely an attempt to compensate for not having the right people in the first place. If you have the right people and leadership at all levels of the organization, it's amazing how good things happen organically without being forced or micromanaged. I realized that excessive accountability is a statement of lack of confidence or trust in the people around you.

CULTURE: Culture is your greatest competitive advantage. The real value of any company or brand, for that matter, is the consistency of the consumer experience and levels of service. I've found that it's only possible by creating a culture of high expectations and having very clear and very high standards. The day I can't run an organization of quality where people are proud to be associated is the day I decide to retire from real estate.

Jay and Michelle Macklin, Co-Founders

Platinum Living Realty
Scottsdale, Arizona

CULTURE: Our culture is something that we're focused on—bringing in the right people who fit our culture. We believe in camaraderie and sharing and caring about others. We've also instituted a Wow program within the company. We want agents to know that even if we don't see them daily, we are paying attention and care about them and what's going on in their lives.

So, we reach out to those who have had something significant happen in their lives to show them we care. Our goal is to have everybody feel that they are part of this culture, whether they're here daily or not. When they walk in the office, they feel welcome. They think that this is a happy place to be. From my own experience as an independent agent for years, I always felt that regardless of where you're at, agents should be welcomed with open arms when they walk in the door.

GROWTH: We did acquire a few offices, but most of our growth was organic. We decided that the growth of any good broker is to have productive agents. At one point, Michelle and I both made the conscious decision that I was not going to sell anymore. My sole job is to recruit, develop, coach, and train agents based on systems and technology. Our focus has always been to acquire agents that we felt needed what we offered.

LEADERSHIP ADVICE: If you treat people fairly, on their commission schedule and overall; if you make fair decisions when there's some conflict, your agents will respect and appreciate you. More importantly, they will stay with you. We have agents who have been with us for 30 to 35 years.

GREATEST CURRENT CHALLENGE: Competing with the many new business models is challenging. In the old days, we learned to compete with the new models as they came into being, whether it was RE/MAX or someone else. Now, it's all technology-based models, and there is money being thrown around. Staying competitive and relevant is a challenge.

— THE LARGEST REGIONAL BRANDS —

For many years now, leading brokerage firms have been opening offices that they do not own but rather are offices where they have licensed, partnered, franchised or through means other than outright ownership grown their retail networks. We refer to these firms as “Regional Brands” due to the numerous ways they build their networks. This report ranks brokerages which are also local or regional franchisors/licensors. Owned business includes all business in which the principal has at least a 50 percent interest. Rankings are based on combined sales volume of owned and franchised business. Please note that the total numbers for the affiliated business for these firms are not verified by outside sources.

TOP CORE SERVICES PROVIDERS

As leading firms have diversified, so too, have we decided to follow this development by tracking the sales of mortgage, title insurance, home warranty policies and homeowners insurance policies, the products that are sold most frequently by leading residential real estate firms. We have produced rankings of the sales of primary services by units sold only.

Ranking of the 50 firms in the REAL Trends 500 by total core services transactions.

Please note that these figures have not been verified.
